The biggest hiring bias

Find me the roundest peg!

When we take a “roundest peg” approach to recruiting ...

on a peg board crafted by generations of white men

... we are NOT prioritizing diversity

Let's try something different

On dimensions of diversity and intersectionality

- We all contain multitudes
- Prioritizing is necessary but also problematic
- Today's focus: sourcing college-educated Black talent
 - LinkedIn is well suited to searching this dimension of diversity

Closer look: HBCUs

What is an HBCU?

Historically
Black
College or University

HBCU (noun):
A college or university that was originally founded to educate students of African American descent

A few facts about HBCUs

- There are 107 HBCUs*
- First HBCU: Cheyney University, founded 1837
- Most HBCUs founded 1865-1900
- Over 1 million HBCU alums on LinkedIn
- Add Divine Nine: another 200K+ Black college grads on LinkedIn

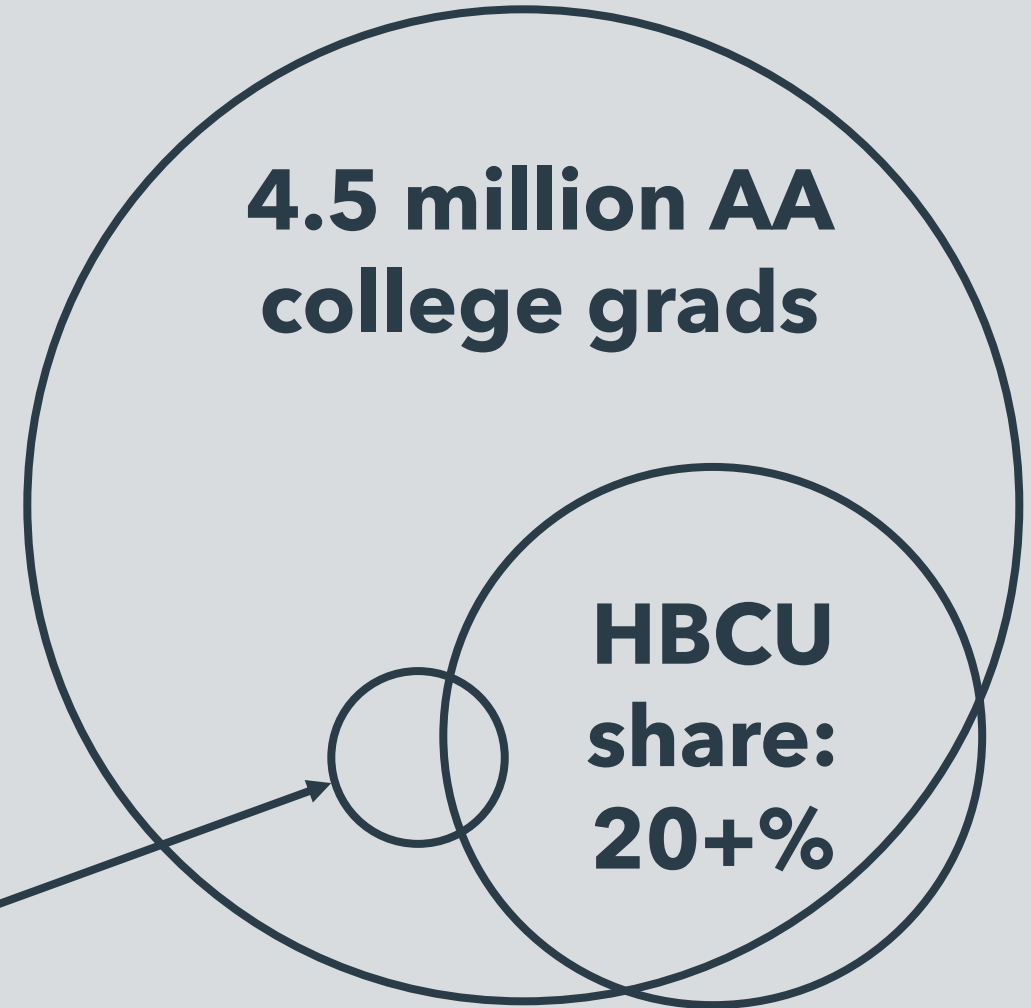

What are the Divine Nine?

- Nine historically Black fraternities/sororities
- Chapters at UW-Madison and other schools
- Over 200,000 Divine Nine alums on LinkedIn
- AND over 40,000 NALFO alums (16 Latinx fraternities/sororities) on LinkedIn

- There are over 4.5 million Black college graduates in the US
- Over 1.2 million of them are easy to find on LinkedIn

Divine Nine
Share (est.): 5%

Let's intentionally use LinkedIn's advanced search capabilities ...

... to source talent along dimensions of human diversity

Let's do it! – hands-on LinkedIn training

- Differences between LinkedIn's Recruiter and Recruiter Lite products
- Warm-up
 - Trying some useful keyword text strings
 - Saving them as custom filters
 - Running sample searches and saving results to a project
- Building HBCU filter (start, may need to finish later)
- Advanced searching – how filters and keyword search terms interact
